Dubrovnik, often referred to as the "Pearl of the Adriatic," is a city in Croatia that offers a rich blend of natural beauty and historical significance. Located on the Dalmatian coast, the city is known for its well-preserved medieval walls and fortifications, which provide a stunning backdrop for the surrounding Adriatic Sea. The Old Town, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, is a dense cluster of red-roofed buildings, narrow streets, and plazas that have been preserved in their original state. The city's harbor, with its many moored boats, is a key feature of the skyline. Dubrovnik is also a center for arts and culture, with numerous galleries, museums, and theaters. The city's location on the coast makes it a popular destination for tourists, who come to explore its history and beauty. The city's architecture is a mix of Roman, Byzantine, and Venetian influences, reflecting its long and varied history. The city's walls, which are some of the best-preserved in Europe, offer a unique perspective on the city's past. The city's harbor is a hub for maritime activity, with many boats and ships coming and going. The city's location on the coast also makes it a popular destination for water sports, such as sailing and scuba diving. 10.00-10.45 Visit Ston – Saltworks Ston, up to 45 min

The under-visited Ston and its neighbor Mali Ston on the Peljesac peninsula are a great escape from the standard southern Dalmatia tourist route. About 59km northwest of Dubrovnik, there are no big resorts or luxury hotels in Ston but there is great eating, great scenery, old stone houses and the longest fortifications in Europe. Ston is famous for second biggest continuing wall in the world (after the Great Wall of China), salt production and oyster farms.

Solana Ston is the oldest active saltworks in Europe, dating back to the 14th century and still producing sea salt in a completely traditional way. Built by the Dubrovnik Republic, its 17 pools use only sun, sea, wind and human skill to create high-quality ecological salt and the prized fleur de sel. Today, the saltworks produces around 2,000 tons of salt annually and remains one of Ston's most unique cultural and historic sites.
